An epic gangster saga, told across decades - from the 1960s to present-day Mumbai. Created by web series-specialist Vikram Chandra. A must watch for Netflix lovers! Netflix's most expensive Indian show is an adaptation of Vikram Chandra's 2006 novel Sacred Games, set in Mumbai before and after the 26/11 attack. It follows the adventures of Sartaj Singh (played by Bollywood legend Saif Ali Khan), a low-ranking police officer who finds himself caught up with criminal overlord Ganesh Gaitonde (Nawazuddin Siddiqui). Season 1 begins six months after the 26/11 terrorist attacks, and follows Sartaj Singh as he works his way up the police ladder and unravels the secrets of Gaitonde and his vast criminal empire. The first season premiered on July 12, 2017. https://www.imdb.com/title/tt6472798/ Season 2 of Sacred Games premiered on July 19, 2018. It follows two years after the first season as Sartaj Singh faces new threats including a powerful international crime network that has arrived in Mumbai to capture Gaitonde alive. The second season is currently available for streaming through Netflix's subscription service in India and other markets around the world. Based on the Indian novel "Sacred Games" by Vikram Chandra. Set in Mumbai, before and after the 26/11 attacks. Set in Mumbai and around the world, the Netflix series follows a self-made gangster and police officer. His personal journey takes him from low to high, as he rises through the ranks of the Mumbai Police. Season 2 premiered on July 19, 2018 $ $ $ $ $ $ Hong-Kong Film Rulers selected "Sacred Games" as part of their fall festival lineup in 2018. The film's producers obtained a seven-film distribution deal with Netflix worth about US$250 million over five years beginning in 2018. In April 2018, Sacred Games received Indian film industry's top award. According to a report, Saif Ali Khan and Nawazuddin Siddiqui were bested by the performances of Mahie Gill and Varun Dhawan in Anubhav Sinha's "Badlapur". Bollywood actor Saif Ali Khan has said he is willing to play the role of gangster Ganesh Gaitonde in a Netflix series based on author Vikram Chandra's 2006 novel "Sacred Games". The project is currently one of Netflix's most expensive shows with a budget of US$120 million. Chandra wrote the novel in English and its translated Hindi version has been adapted for the screen. Saif (52) said he was not aware of the budget, but felt it was big for any film even by Hollywood standards. "At this point I don't really know how much it costs because we don't talk about budgets in our industry and I think it is a good thing (laughs). But I am guessing that it is a big show and I don't mean to compare, but when they made 'The Crown' in Hollywood, which is also a very expensive show, people were talking about the budget being around US$120 million or something like that.
